

The Center for Positive Organizational Scholarship (Center for POS) is a community of scholars devoted to energizing and transforming organizations through research on the theory and practice of positive organizing and leadership. We are passionately dedicated to the development and dissemination of POS research.

Opportunities for Doctoral Students and Researchers

Invitation to University of Michigan Doctoral Students: Center for POS faculty members welcome the chance to work with doctoral students on research projects. Project tasks range from specific research assistance (literature reviews, data collection, coding) to full-scale research collaborations. We suggest you contact specific faculty members (see faculty profiles on the Center for POS website) for potential opportunities or to share specific ideas you might have.

Positive Links Speaker Series: Positive Links is a monthly speaker series on topics related to POS. Hosted by the Center and led by scholars and practitioners from around North America, Positive Links is an opportunity to learn and discuss new research and emerging POS practices. Visit the Center for POS website for information about upcoming sessions, as well as video streams of most past sessions. Please email positiveorg@umich.edu to be added to the email group for notices.

POS Research Incubator: The Center hosts a bi-weekly series of one-hour presentations of research in various stages of development by scholars at the University of Michigan; the discussion between presenter and audience generates valuable feedback on still-in-progress research. Topics have included trust, identity, and meaning at work. Please email positiveorg@umich.edu to be added to the email group for notices.

Electronic Newsletter: Sign up for Insight | Inspiration | Impact.

Community of Scholars listing: The Center for POS website features a Community of Scholars with listings for nearly 200 individuals engaged in POS-related research. To join, please send a description of your POS-related work to positiveorg@umich.edu.

Center for POS at Academy of Management Annual Meetings: The impact of POS increases each year at AOM, and the Center for POS is at the heart of that presence, with Center faculty organizing research presentations and professional development workshops. The Center also hosts a Gathering of POS Scholars, during which scholars review accomplishments of the previous year and then break into groups of individuals with common research interests to foster networking and to build research collaborations.
